

Editorial Message — On-line Electronic Submission and Review System

Bor-Sen Chen, Editor-in-Chief, and C. W. Tao, Managing Editor

The on-line electronic submission and review system is now used to facilitate the paper submission and accelerate the paper reviewing process. Also, the Associate Editor team is enlarged to reduce the heavy load used to have on the Associate Editors. What we really want is to make sure that each paper review is finished in three months. With the efforts, the quick publishing of research results of our authors can be expected.

Although IJFS is published quarterly right now, our authors are encouraged to submit papers to IJFS. If the accepted papers are more than what we can publish in four issues, we would consider publishing the IJFS bimonthly or even monthly.

Moreover, the applications of special issues are welcomed. A proposal of the application for the special issue is required to be submitted through the electronic paper submission system. If the application is approved, then the organizer of this special issue would be invited as the guest editor. The IJFS would announce the call for paper for this special issue at the same time.

The guest editor can let IJFS review the papers or process the paper review himself. However, the review results should be attached to the papers. Also, the guest editor should make this special issue published on time (as indicated in the proposal).

We are looking forward to having your contributions and bringing your quality work to our readers. If you have any suggestion which can improve the IJFS, please do not hesitate to let us know.
